

Abstract: Robust Optimization is a relatively new field, but related to some earlier work which focused on replacing algebraic constraints with the more rudimentary notion of sets and set containment. Some perspectives and insights between these two approaches for modeling uncertainty will be presented.